LOKUM

The first mention of Lokum in writing came in 1023, in connection with the founding of the Benedictine abbey and monastery. According to legend, Richard the Lion Heart was cast ashore here after being shipwrecked in 1192 while returning from the Crusades. The view he made to build a church on the spot where he came ashore should be he be saved was kept at least in part. Although he became ashore in Lokrum, at the request of the people of Dubrovnik, he agreed to have the church built in the city itself.

RANDOM FACTS

In 1979., UNESCO added the old city of Dubrovnik on the list of the World Heritage centres. Dubrovnik is surrounded by 2 kilometers of ancient walls and fortifications. Most of its buildings are built using the Baroque style architectural designs.

The city was the capital of the adventurous Dubrovnik Republic, a maritime republic. The Dubrovnik Republic was among the first to recognise independence of the United States of America. Some historians state that Dubrovnik was the first state to do so.

As well as being regarded as a safer tourist destination than hot spots across the Mena region, the Croatian city Dubrovnik is also popular as a location for films and tv. Walt Disney filmed the eighth instalment of the star wars series in the centre of the Croatian port, which also has played King's Landing in HBO's Game of Thrones.

Within the old city of Dubrovnik sits the Franciscan Monastery. Inside of the Monastery there is an ancient pharmacy. This pharmacy is indeed an aged wonder – it's the third oldest in all of Europe and the oldest pharmacy still in use on the continent today.

Lindo is the most famous Dubrovnik traditional dance. It has already celebrated its 53rd birthday. Every event or manifestation begins or ends with Lindo.

The reason why Saint Vlaho is declared as the protector of Dubrovnik City lies in legend. The legend says that he informed the Dubrovnik residents about an attack from Venetian ships. They reacted in time and succeeded to save the city.
