RANDOM FACTS

Zadar was awarded as the best European destination in 2016.

World's first pipe organ that is played by the sea's rhythmic waves is in Zadar.

In May 1964, Alfred Hitchcock checked into room 204 of the classic and now closed Hotel Zagreb on the waterfront in Zadar. His words for the city were: "The sunset of Zadar is the world's most beautiful and incomparably better than in Key West, Florida."

One of the most mythical and mysterious landmarks of Egypt is the great sphinx of Giza, and Zadar has one, too. Its size doesn't match the one in Egypt, but it tells its own story. In the garden surrounding the so-called Villa Attilia in the Brodarica district, its first owner had a sphinx built to commemorate his beloved wife.

Zadar's past is filled with numerous turmoils, wars and devastation so it is no wonder it was really in need of patron saints. Not one, but four, and each has a legend of their own linking them to the city. They are St Simon, St Chrysogonus Martyr, St Zoilus and St Anastasia.

The main street in Zadar is named Široka ulica (široka = 'wide') and it is believed it's as old, or even older, than the city itself. The Zadrans, however, refer to it by its historical name, Kalelarga. A popular song is dedicated to its significance for the people of Zadar.
